4. The DDA Office Chiefs Conference

The Director of Security commented on several topics that were considered during the 18-20 March conference

25X1A

(a) Letter of Instruction - Some Office Chiefs believed that the device is best used as a job description. Others felt it should be used only to point out special objectives under application of the MBO Program as it applies to the individual employee. LOIs are "here to stay" as a DDA management tool. A DDA policy paper is being prepared to give the Directorate precise direction on how LOIs should be used.

(b) Positive Indicators - Although this concept has been difficult to apply, especially within the Office of Security, the DDA believes that it has meaning and application within the Directorate. The Office of Security will examine its progress to date. Up to now, we have been concentrating on qualitative indicators. We should also determine if the concept can be better used if we develop Office level indicators that can be applied and followed quantitatively.

CONFIDENTIAL

(c) DDA Personnel Panel - The Directorate is considering the use of developing a DDA Career Training Program. If adopted, trainees would be selected from personnel already having served several years with the Directorate for Administration.

(d) Division Chiefs Conference - Mr. Blake advised that a conference with the DDA Division Chiefs from all Offices was very productive and that the attendees would soon be given his feedback on their comments and suggestions.

(e) The DDA Exchange Magazine - A questionnaire is to be prepared for the magazine readers and their answers will help the DDA Management and Assessment Staff determine if the magazine has been effective as a communication device within the Directorate.

(f) DDA Reporting Procedures - Mr. Blake uses items taken from his morning meeting with Office heads, as well as items from the weekly events logs to keep the DCI advised of significant Directorate matters. Furthermore, the DDA is very much interested in all such items and he believes that such reports can be used to keep Office Chiefs aware of significant happenings within the Directorate.

(g) Summer-Only Employees - Some Offices within the Directorate would be forced to periodically hire short term employees if they could not depend upon assistance every summer under the Summer-Only Employees Program. Therefore, the program will continue to be used by the Directorate.
